Prof. Allan Curr-First Baptist Church. Last night, at the First Baptist church. Prof. Allan Curr delivered his mos thrilling, pathetic and exceedingly amusing lecture on "The Master Passion; or, Love, Human and Divine." In spite of the very unfavorable weather, the church was filled with an enthusiastic audience, who were held in enthralled attention for nearly two hours. Speaking without notes, the distin-guished orator depicted the master pas-sion in all its varied, serious and humorous phases. Treating first of love divine, he then dealt with love human in its four circles of love of kind, friendship, ove of instinct, and, lastly, love proper. Nothing could have been more succe ful than the professor's treatment of his most exciting and attractive theme at one time melting his audience into tears, and the next convulsing them with laughter. No lecturer who has ever appeared in our city has won for himself such a reputation and so many golden opinions from all sorts of men. No other speaker has ever succeeded in sustaining the interest of the public in his efforts to instruct and please so long, and he will leave Memphis with the warmest good-will of many of our best citizens. The professor lectures to-night at the Central Methodist church (Dr. Slater's), on "A Night in the English House of Commons," with pictures, serious and humorous, of the leading statesmen of England, including Bright, Gladstone, Disraeli, etc. This lecture is one of the most effective and humore of all the professor's themes, full of fun and vivid descriptions drawn from personal knowledge of the men and manners he will depict in connection with scenes in the English parliament. No one should miss hearing this brilliant speaker and gifted son of Old Scotia.

NEW BOOKS.

MRS. ARMINGTON'S WARD; OR, THE INFERIOR SEX. By D. Thew. Wright, Boston. Lee & Shepard; 1874. The author of this novel is, we are informed by a friend, one of the leading members of the Ohio bar, a gentleman tion and force, and in teaching quali-ties, it is a novel far beyond the average LEUBRIE'S promenade concert and of American authors. The purpose of it, and the result it teaches after, is to COSTUMES at D'Arcy's den, 377 Main.

DR. WILLIAM BRAZIER'S LIVER hold labor and care, the manufactory or the school rooms, and we think in the selection of his beroine, who illustrates admirably the tact and intelligence of her sex, he is singularly happy. Emily is her name, and she is one of three children, wholly orphaned, who is found by Charles and Robert, sons of Mrs. Armington, on the leading thoroughfare of a large city, begging. Attracted to her, they question her as to her con-dition, her family, and becoming interested in her story, accompany her to her squalid home in order there to verify white or beautifully tinted, at from $5 to $10 her sorry statements. This done to their satisfaction, they take her and her sister (Nancy) and brother (Jack) to large share of the simple philosophy of the golden rule. The heroine rescued from poverty proves herself worthy of the help and love of Mrs. Armington and her son by a devotion as pure and as constant as that of daughter and sister for mother and brother. In sickness and in health Emily is ever the ald and confident of her second mother, proving an inspiration and comfort to her through the trials and troubles inseperable from life, a support, a prop, a stay and comfort to her, such as it were impossible for either of her sons to be, with all their devotion to her. Hers is is a beautiful character, ripe in all good womanly qualities, useful, benevolent, merciful, encouraging and courageous. She is strong without inclination for the platform, the forum or the courts, and admirably illustrates the position of the conceded even in these days of extending liberality. Emily, for instance, becomes a physician, and is the means of relieving much distress and sickness, in one case exemplifying the steadiness of nerve and courage of women in cases of accident where the skill of the sur-geon is called suddenly into requisition. She is a heroine in quiet, every-day American life, a type of the ambitious women who would have their sex occupy the whole ground of their existence, and teaching generous charity and whole-hearted devotion by the recipient of that charity, it is still more to be commanded, especially since it is well-written, is characterized by fidelity to American life, and is brimfull of argument pro and con in reference to the world, and the motives, incentives and actions of the men and women in it. Mr. Wright has made a success of this, his first venture, and, encouraged by it, should make

FUNERAL OF JUDGE H. S. LEE.

Meeting of the Bar of Memphis-Proceedings in Regard to the Funeral Obsequies-The Funeral.

A Large Attendance of the Members of the Bar, General Council, City Officials, Ltc.

The members of the bar met in the second chancery court at ten o'clock yesterday morning for the purpose of adopting suitable resolutions expressive of the grief occasioned by the death of Hon. Harry S. Lee, when the following proceedings were had: On motion of Colonel H. C. King, E. S. Hammond, Esq., was elected chair-man, and presided over the meeting. Harry M. Hill was elected secretary. On motion, a committee of three was appointed to confer with the city coun-cil in regard to the funeral of Judge Lee. The following is the committee: G. A. Hanson, H. F. Dix and John D.

Upon motion of Colonel H. C. Young, a committee of five was appointed to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the bar on the death of Judge Lee. The following named gentlemen constitute the committee: H. C. Young, Dan Rice's Circus.

On motion of Colonel Landon C. entirely new in arenic representations, | Haynes it was resolved that the bar and church at the head of Alabama street, where the funeral services will be held. It was also resolved that this meeting adjourn to four o'clock to-morrow evening, at which time the committee on resolutions will make their report. THE FUNERAL was conducted in accordance with the above programme, and was very largely attended by county and city officials, members of the bar, and friends of the deceased. At the conclusion of the exercises, the coffin, with its contents, was placed in the hearse and escorted to its final resting-place, the order being as Chief Athy, Captains Smith and Walsh, Sergeants Braun, Dee, Pendergrast and Helm, on horseback. Band of music. Detachment of thirty policemen in full dress. Firemen on foot. Carriages, containing Mayor Loague, city officials, councilmen, aldermen and Hearse, drawn by four white horses. Carriages, containing the family, and m intimate friends of the deceased. THE FUNERAL PROCESSION moved down Main street at a slow pace, the cortege attracting general attention from every observer. The remains were conducted to Elmwood cemetery, and there interred. The exercises at the grave were simple, yet solemn and impressive, and none were there but deeply realized the loss of him, who, in every relation of life, whether as citizen friend or official, won the confidence and enjoyed the respect of the public.
